

ESKRIDGE

PRESIDENT WILSON'S ADDRESS

President Wilson, in his address, said:

"I esteem it a very great pleasure and a real privilege to extend to the men who are attending this reunion the very cordial greetings of the government of the United States."

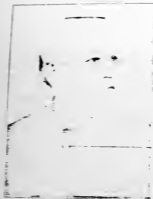

"I suppose that as you mix with one another you chiefly feel these to be days of memory, when your thoughts go back and recalls those days of struggle in which your hearts were strassed, in which the whole nation seemed in grapple, and I dare say that you are thrilled as you remember the heroic things that were then done."

"You are glad to remember that heroic things were done on both sides and that men in those days fought in something like the old spirit of chivalric gallantry."

"There are many memories of the civil war that thrill along the blood and make one proud to have been sprung of a race that could produce such bravery and constancy; and yet the world does not live on memories."

"The world is constantly making its tortuous way forward into new and different days, and I believe that one of the things that contribute satisfaction to a reunion like this and a welcome like this is that this is also a day of oblivion."

"There are some things that we have thankfully buried, and among them are the great passions of division which once threatened to rend this nation in twain."

surrounded with each other in the terrible order of battle and seeing other results of that well remembered conflict this banner became one of our trophies, which we here in triumph took as part of the spoils of the victor. And as justice to you, as an eye witness, reflects no discredit upon you. You had attacked and were driving in your front a Confederate force, when the 5th swept down upon your flank and rear and turned the tide of battle against you. We now come and I stand here in behalf of the survivors of the gallant old 5th Virginia Infantry, who fired the first gun of the army of the valley under Stonewall Jackson at Falling Water, July 2, 1861, and was in the charge on Sheridan's lines at Appomattox station, on that memorable morning of the 9th day of April, 1865, and whose hearts now go out to you in warmth and kindness, in response to the welcome you have given them and the generosity of soul you have manifested, and the name of the 5th Virginia Infantry, "Stonewall Brigade" Army of Northern Virginia. I now represent this flag to you, a noble and worthy warrior, the gallant, general and commander 28th N. Y. Volunteers. And as doing so I repeat the fact that no greater pleasure have I ever experienced, no more agreeable duty have I ever performed, no prouder have I ever done.

Take it then my valiant friends, and hold it in memory of times and things past. Treasure it now as the emblem of the hopes of a reunited phalanx, as a memento of this occasion, signifying and demonstrating the return of the affection and good will of the Union, who met and crossed their swords in strife and anger on the field of battle. Useful it is to the great purpose of a now peaceful heaven, carry it proudly, bear it aloft, and never let it trail in the dust.

ADDRESS OF E. F. BROWN, TO THE ADDRESS OF MAJ. J. W. NEWTON, ON THE RETURN OF
THE FLAG OF THE 28TH N. Y., CAPTURED
AUGUST 1, 1864, BY THE 5TH VIRGINIA
INFANTRY

Major Newton, Officer and Veteran of the 5th Virginia

As the representative of the 28th Regiment it becomes my duty to respond to your eloquent and finished address. The occasion is one to be proud of and I accept the task with pleasurable emotions. Your kind manner and patriotic sentiments are appreciated and the hearts of this entire assembly have been stirred by your reference to the Flag of our country. This flag has a history, would it could speak for itself and tell it. It is a strange circumstance that it comes to us after years of absence and becomes a bond of union between those who, twenty years ago, fought for it, and those who fought against it. History tells many strange and more wonderful than this. Could this flag itself it could surely unfold some interesting and instructive lessons. Much of its history is left to the imagination, but I will reveal, and if you will pardon me, I will undertake to give a little of it in a short-hand manner. It is not important and will be of little interest to go back of its introduction to the 28th Regiment. It came to us a new, bright, beautiful flag from the hands of his then Excellency, General H. D. Morgan, and our knowledge of it dates from the 22nd August 1864—more than twenty years ago this day. On that memorable day we were fully organized at Appomattox, N. C. and were in the service of the President of the United States. It was then a beautiful and attractive emblem. But it had its all things ever needed in official life. His death ended a career that was a brilliant one, indeed. His death was a personal loss to every member of the regiment. Association with such a man was an honor and the remembrance of him and his heroic services will ever be a living and cherished memory.

Major James W. Newton was born March 8, 1838, in Greenville, Augusta County, Virginia. His father's name was John Newton, and was called by every one "Squire Newton," his mother's name was Amanda Tate Newton.

James W. Newton was elected Captain of the Volunteer Company organized in Greenville in 1860. At twenty-one years of age taking great interest in his Company of 130 volunteer men in his Company. Afterwards when the election of Officers was held for Company E, 5th Va. Regiment, he was re-nominated as Captain and when the Officer voted all in favor of Captain James W. Newton step forward and the whole one hundred and thirty moved forward. He afterward was promoted to Major of the 5th Virginia Regiment. He was in every Battle in which his Regiment engaged in. At the battle of Winchester he was so badly wounded his left limb had to be amputated. He was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel after that battle, but the surrender came before he got well. He died January 7th, 1864.

This is the Flag that was captured by the 5th Virginia Regiment from the 28th New York Volunteer Regiment at the battle of Cedar Mountain, Virginia, August 9th, 1862, and returned to the 28th New York by the 5th Virginia Regiment of Infy., May 22, 1863, at Niagara Falls.

RETURN OF THE FLAG

Major J. W. Newton of the 5th Virginia in returning the old flag to the 28th said:

Col. Brown, Officers and Veterans of the 28th New York Volunteers.

By reason of the untimely absence of Captain James Connelley, Jr., the gallant Adjutant of the old 5th Virginia in the days of chivalry, and which circumstance we profoundly regret, as he was chosen to represent us as one of the orators of this occasion, it behooves me as Commandant of this expedition to stand before you as his representative, and as this fact was only revealed to me since leaving Virginia, you will pardon me for using manuscript.

We come now to perform a duty in itself unique and one that presents indeed a beautiful anomaly. In the annals of our times, in the rolling of the ages, in the history of the world, in all the experience of men raised and extensive as it has been, this peculiar and significant act of fraternity has never before been exemplified or demonstrated. And so this, if for no other reason, I thank God I have lived to see this day, to view these surroundings, to meet you and meet you as we do, and to discharge the most pleasant duty of my life. This grand and beautiful act that we now propose to perform, has never before been illustrated or witnessed by a fraternity assemblage of men like this—the return of a flag to the regiment from which it was captured in war, by the regiment that captured it, on an occasion in peace, where the latter are the honored guests of the former. You do not fail to remember that on the 9th day of August, 1862, we met in bitter antagonism, opposed von on the famous battle ground of Cedar Mountain, when and where we mutually

THE EXERCISES TUESDAY

A more disagreeable morning than that which dawned upon us Tuesday could not be well imagined, but nevertheless, promptly at 11 o'clock the procession was formed in front of the hotel, headed by Marshal Col. E. F. Bowen and the Philharmonic Band, followed by the 5th Virginia, 85 men, under command of Major Newton, and citizens of Virginia accompanying them. Dudley Donnelly Post 133, G. A. R., Commander Beck, 30 men; Sprout Post, of Lockport, Commander Captain A. Ticknor; the survivors of the 26th Regiment N. Y. Vols. in the order named, and a line of march taken toward Prospect Park Pavilion. The Pavilion was handsomely decorated with flags, and the seats on one side well filled with citizens, the remainder being left for the soldiers. The assemblage was soon called to order by President Flagler and prayer offered by Rev. Geo. F. Rosemuller, of St. Peter's Church, after which Capt. Flagler delivered the following

I have looked over Mr. Buckley's History of the reunited North and South; the kindly mingling of the Blue and the Gray—but I have known for many years that he was a Christian gentleman and has given to the public the only History of its kind that has been written and I am sure it will be read with interest and pleasure by a large class of our people.

Return of the Flag.

Annual Re-Union of the 28th N. Y. Volunteers—they ascertain the 5th Virginia Regt. Veterans and Citizens, of Virginia.

History does not mention any event, similar to that which took place yesterday. Many years ago two regiments met in deadly strife, the most bitter enemies, yesterday they met again and clasped hands as brothers, with every feeling of animosity buried. When the old flag of the 28th N. Y. Volunteers was found and it was fully proven that it was captured by the 5th Virginia, it was resolved to invite them to participate in its return at the 22nd annual Re-union, which took place here yesterday. An invitation was sent to Virginia and readily accepted by the survivors of the gallant "Stonewall" brigade A. N. V.

The 5th Va. and Citizens left Staunton, Va., May 19, 1883, at 1 o'clock, p. m., arrived in Baltimore at 9:30 o'clock that evening, stopped in Baltimore until Sunday night at 1-15, took breakfast the next morning at Williamsburg, Pa., meeting a most hearty welcome at Carlisle by the soldiers and citizens of that place, and were furnished with an excellent dinner. Here they were joined by Col. Brown, Gen. Bowen and Capt. Parkhill and by them escorted to this place reaching here at 5-25 Monday afternoon, in the midst of a severe storm which rather tended to dampen their spirits for a time. But the cordial welcome which awaited them at
